Apprenticeship bond of Lydia Spellman

Craven County, NC - April 7, 1762

Although no last name is given in this apprenticeship paper, research in the county court records for Craven County show that this is Lydia Spellman, daughter of Sarah Spellman, as she was the only "Lydia" to be apprenticed to Anna Bryan during the months of March-April of 1762. Her siblings Aaron, Asa, and David were bound out the same day.

Note about font changes in the text:

- the f character signifies the "f" used in colonial text, usually in cases of a double "s" where the first "s" looks like an "f" (ex: "witnefseth" instead of "witnesseth"), but it some cases, all "s" looks like an "f" (ex: "witneffeth"), in which case there will be double "ff"
- This form was type-set with blanks for writing in names and dates. I have tried to duplicate that, but of course, without scanning I cannot duplicate the handrwriting. I have changed the font to 16 point Monotype Corsiva for all instances where something is written by hand, including the signatures.
- In many cases, apprentices were given to men, not usually women, so the form had male gendered words (he, him, master, etc.) in reference to the apprenticeship master. The person who filled out this form crossed out most of those male gendered words and replaced them by hand with female gendered. It looks a bit messy, I'm sorry, I just wanted to keep the text as close to the original as possible.
